Belmont Square is a distinctive courtyard apartment complex comprised of 76 connected units in three rows. The first row faces Columbia Avenue. Rows 2 and 3 face each other along a footpath called Columbia Place, which opens to West 2nd Street and Miramar Avenue. The property is comprised of 38 parcels which each contain a duplex. Two parcels each make up a symmetrical block that is decorated with two entrances at the center which share a concrete stoop, topped by a cornice and a pair of windows framed by pilasters. At each end, a second entrance sits at the top of a separate concrete stoop, framed by a window on each side and three windows above. Molding above the door and upper story windows creates the outline of long rectangles. The parcel lines go down the middle of the block, which creates duplex parcels that contain one shared stoop entrance and one separate stoop entrance. This is often visually noticeable through differences in paint or stucco texture between parcels. Where original fenestration is composed of paired multi-light wood casement windows, but several replacements have been made to units over the years. The units facing Columbia Avenue tend to retain a higher degree of integrity than the units along Columbia Place. Each duplex has a small front yard planted or fenced according to the owner's prerogatives. Alterations typically include fences around yards, replaced windows/doors, addition of aluminum awnings, and various textures of stucco. Only one parcel has suffered substantial alterations.

*Boundary Justification: The three rows which comprise the development and surrounding landscaping/hardscape.

*Significance: Theme: Streetcar Apartment Suburbs, 1906-1940
Period of Significance: 1923
Applicable Criteria: 3 (CR and LA HCM)

Belmont Square appears eligible for the California Register and for designation as a Los Angeles Historic Cultural Monument under Criterion 3 at the local level as a significant and unique example of courtyard housing as an important property type within the dominant pattern of development for Westlake. Courtyard housing is a significant property type within the context of residential development in Los Angeles. They represent a notable development response to contradictory pressures inherent in urban Los Angeles: to accommodate increased density but appeal to renters who sought affordable housing with a relationship to the mild climate outside. While several excellent examples of the property type remain in Westlake, on a Citywide basis courtyard housing is a property type which is considered once common, but now increasingly rare. Due to several alterations to individual units that impact the integrity of the entire complex, the property does not retain sufficient integrity to be eligible for the National Register.

Belmont Square was designed in 1923 by architect David J. Witmer for A.A. Daugherty, a Santa Monica based developer who wanted to import the concept of New York row houses to California. From the outset, Daugherty planned Belmont Square to be a community-based complex, where the owners of each duplex would have part ownership in the private walkway, service alleys, and other amenities, and that they would make decisions about these communal resources together in a housing association. The concept of these row houses was novel in Los Angeles, and City officials initially approached the plan with consternation. Initial subdivision approvals by the Planning Commission were split, with concerns about congestion and housing conditions at the top of the list of objections. The buildings were completed in February 1924 for about $750,000. The units were offered on an “own your own” plan, where a family would purchase a duplex, live in one side of the duplex and rent out the other in order to pay off their mortgage. Early advertisements touted the complex’s proximity to downtown as its prime amenity. “Here you have the convenience of a Downtown hotel, yet the comfort of a high, quiet, residential neighborhood.” The development was adjacent to the Crown Hill streetcar stop at 3rd Street and Columbia Avenue.
